

Collectible Errors

Normally, when an error occurs in a procedure, the procedure stops on the first error it meets. Using collectable errors essentially postpones error handling to the end of the procedure call. AL code execution doesn't stop on errors. But instead, it continues until the end and gathers errors as they occur.